Re: Evaluation of the State's response to the Covid-19 pandemic

Dear Elizabeth,

As you will be aware, the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission is both the 'A' status National Human Rights Institution and the National Equality Body for Ireland, established under the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014. We are the Independent Monitoring Mechanism for Ireland under the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities ('UNCRPD'),¹ the independent National Rapporteur on the Trafficking of Human Beings,² and we will be assigned the role of the Co-ordinating National Preventive Mechanism

¹ Section 103 of the Assisted Decision-Making (Capacity) (Amendment) Act 2022 amends section 10(2) of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Act 2014 to provide that one of our functions is to promote and monitor the implementation in the State of the UNCRPD.

² IHREC, Commission Takes on New Role as Ireland's National Rapporteur on the Trafficking of Human Beings (22 October 2020).

under the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, pending ratification³. We also have a role in working to uphold equality and rights protections on the island of Ireland post Brexit.⁴

Under our Act, we are mandated to keep under review the adequacy and effectiveness of law and practice in the State relating to the protection of human rights and equality. Since the outset of the Covid-19 pandemic, we have raised a range of specific human rights and equality concerns arising from the State's legislative and policy responses to the pandemic [see Appendix 1 for list of our positions on the response to the Covid-19 pandemic]. In particular, our commissioned research report 'Ireland's Emergency Powers During the Covid-19 Pandemic' which evaluated Ireland's use of pandemic-related emergency powers, identified some of the key human rights and equality challenges presented by the Covid-19 pandemic.⁵ Forthcoming Commission-supported research will examine the impact of the pandemic on structurally vulnerable groups in the labour market.⁶

Covid-19 and the response to the pandemic has both exposed and increased existing structural inequalities in Ireland, including by disproportionately affecting certain structurally vulnerable groups and sectors of Irish society.⁷ Due to significant human rights and equality concerns that

³ To be provided under the Inspection of Places of Detention Bill, when enacted.

⁴ In the wake of the UK's withdrawal from the EU, the Commission, along with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission ('NIHRC') and the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland ('ECNI') comprise the Article 2(1) Working Group of the Dedicated Mechanism. This group is mandated to provide oversight of, and report on, rights and equality issues falling within the scope of the Article 2 [Windsor Framework] commitment that have an island of Ireland dimension.

⁵ The report was authored by Conor Casey, Oran Doyle, David Kenny and Donna Lyons (COVID-19 Law and Human Rights Observatory at Trinity College Dublin).

⁶ The report is authored by Anousheh Alamir, Frances McGinnity and Helen Russell (Economic and Social Research Institute).

⁷ The pandemic had a disproportionate effect on a number of groups including older people; women; disabled people; those from disadvantaged socio-economic backgrounds; those living in, or at risk of poverty; Travellers; Roma; members of minority ethnic groups; International Protection applicants; residents in Direct Provision and emergency accommodation; living in inadequate housing; people living in homelessness; victims and survivors of Domestic, Sexual and Gender-Based Violence; those with caring responsibilities; people that are digitally excluded; people in precarious employment; people employed in the health and care sectors; and people in institutional and detention settings (such as nursing homes, residential disability facilities, mental health settings and prisons).

have arisen during the pandemic, we welcome comments by An Taoiseach regarding the establishment of a comprehensive evaluation of Ireland's legislative and policy responses to the Covid-19 pandemic.⁸ We welcome that a focus of the evaluation will include applying the learning from the response to the pandemic to how we respond to future crises. In our Strategy Statement 2022–2024, we have committed to identify protective measures for the State to adopt to prevent equality and human rights abuses against structurally vulnerable groups in the event of future crises and pandemics.⁹

While we welcome the proposed establishment of an evaluation of the response to the Covid-19 pandemic, we are concerned that no concrete details about the scope, timeframe or approach have been made available to the Commission. The terms of reference have not been agreed and there has been no commitment from the State for a rights-based framework for the evaluation. We note that in 2022, the United Nations Human Rights Committee recommended that the State "should consider carrying out a comprehensive review of its response to the COVID-19 pandemic, including a human rights impact assessment that evaluates the effect of restrictions on rights, specifically with regard to minority groups."¹⁰ We recommended that the State carries out an independent, thorough, transparent and rights-based evaluation into the pandemic response, ⁹ IHREC, Strategy Statement 2022–2024 (2022) pp. 16–17.

⁸ An Taoiseach: 'A comprehensive evaluation of how the country managed Covid-19 will provide an opportunity to learn lessons from our experiences in dealing with the pandemic. It will include a review of the whole-of-government response to the pandemic and how we might do better and be in a stronger position if another pandemic or other similar event were to occur. It will include a consideration of the health service response, covering hospitals, the community and nursing homes, along with the wider economic and social response. It is intended to have a public element to hear the lived experiences of all of society. The review should be undertaken by those independent of the national response and with relevant expertise. A consultation with Opposition parties has been scheduled for this week and I intend to bring the terms of reference to Government shortly thereafter.' including examining the impact of emergency measures on the rights of people in order to plan for future crises.¹¹

We have previously highlighted a number of areas that the evaluation should examine including: the impact of the pandemic on the rights of structurally vulnerable groups;¹² the impact of emergency measures on children's rights;¹³ the proportionality of public health restrictions on maternal healthcare;¹⁴ the impact the Covid-19 pandemic had on Travellers as a direct consequence of their inadequate living conditions;¹⁵ and, older people's care and support, including the impact of the privatisation model¹⁶. This is a non-exhaustive list of areas that the evaluation should examine; the proposed areas of focus of the evaluation should be informed by consultation with affected groups.

The design, functioning and outcomes of the independent evaluation should be underpinned by relevant Constitutional, European, and international human rights and equality standards including:

• The right to an adequate, effective and prompt remedy;¹⁷ which encompasses the right to truth, reparations and guarantees of non-repetition, restitution and rehabilitation.

• The 'do no harm' principle.²⁵

We recommend that human rights and equality standards and expertise be embedded in the terms of reference and membership of the State's Covid-19 evaluation.²⁶ We note that guidance on a human rights based approach can be drawn from the work of our European network body, the European Network of National Human Rights Institutions (ENNHRI).²⁷ A human rights based approach is underpinned by five key human rights principles, the PANEL principles (Participation, Accountability, Non-Discrimination and equality, Empowerment, and Legality).²⁸ The UK Covid-19 Inquiry²⁹ and the Scottish Covid-19 Inquiry³⁰ have committed to employing a human rights based approach, drawing from the PANEL principles, in their respective work.

The Covid-19 pandemic posed and continues to present new and difficult human rights and equality challenges, particularly for those already marginalised in Irish society. The fundamental societal challenges laid bare by the pandemic – systemic inequality, the strains on our social harmony, and the serious gaps in democratic scrutiny and accountability – did not fade away as restrictions were lifted.³¹ A thorough examination of the human rights and equality impacts of the

The State should ensure that its domestic laws, to the extent possible, provide that a victim who has suffered violence or trauma should benefit from special consideration and care to avoid his or her re-traumatization in the course of legal and administrative procedures designed to provide justice and reparation."

²⁸ The Panel principles were adopted by ENNHRI from the work of the Scottish Human Rights Commission.

³⁰ The Scottish Covid-19 Inquiry's Terms of Reference require the Inquiry to demonstrate how a human rights-based approach by the inquiry has contributed to the inquiry's findings in facts and recommendations. legislative and policy responses to Covid-19 provides an opportunity to futureproof our human rights commitments by putting in place protective measures to prevent rights abuses, as other crises emerge and intensify.

I and IHREC staff are available to meet with you to discuss the proposed evaluation and the issues raised in this correspondence.

Many thanks in advance for your consideration of these issues.

Yours sincerely,
